“HOW DOES A SAFETY CULTURE CULMINATE THE WORLD RECORD OF 100 MILLION WORKER HOURS WITHOUT LTI (LOST TIME INCIDENT)”

By

Nils Steinbrecher, Managing Director, APAC

In this presentation, Nils will share how a thorough and dynamic approach in the creation of a high performing culture brings about not only safety, but also an exponential improvement in quality, attendance, diminishment of absenteeism [85%] and conflict of the Engineering Procurement and Construction (EPC) contract Habshan 5 Process Plant Project, the largest in the Abu Dhabi gas industry. It was valued at around $4.7 billion USD and involved over 800 Engineers from 6 different countries.

Challenges :-

- Project of this scale and complexity itself pose a challenging task
- Safety among entire workforce was of utmost concern
- To bring together teams of 35 different nationalities on project

Suffered a deeply unfortunate but preventable accident in 2011.

Nils Steinbrecher is based in Singapore for 11 years. He is a Part-time lecturer at National University of Singapore (NUS) for his Master of Environmental Management Course.

Nils was a partner and energy climate change practice leader at ERM in Asia and Europe and was the Strategic Account Leader and Business Director for ASEAN, Japan and Korea at DuPont Sustainable Solutions, an operations management consulting firm prior to joining with JMJ.

Having worked with many global and regional clients to transform their organizations' safety culture and operational performance, Nils brings a wealth of consulting experience to his role.
